Poetry.

Street Sixteen.

The following pleasing verses were never published before their present appearance among the Transcript. They were written in March, 1868, by a distinguished member of the Vermont bar, who inherited rare talent as a jury advocate, only to use the same semi-occasionally and in secret. A. Y. S.

Dear lady, when I look at one
So lovely and so loved as you,
From whose young life has not yet gone
The rose which the morning dew
I wish to think of all the years
Whose fading memories rise between
The and the time when long ago
I had my heart to Sweet Sixteen.

Prate as they may of wiser thought,
Of cooler blood and sterner brain,
Or argue wisdom dearly bought
By anxious care and degrading pain,
In all the years Old Time can bring
In all the longest life has seen,
There are no hopes, no joys, no loves
So sweet as those of Sweet Sixteen.

And though the charms may wear away
As roses fade and dews exhale,
Though glossiest locks may turn to gray,
And fairest cheeks grow wan and pale,
Yet who can doubt those daisy loved,
In lands of mortal eye unseen,
Beyond the stars, shall all again
The angel hues of Sweet Sixteen!

Women in the Profession.

That clever and kindly Old Bachelor who discusses social questions with such genial wisdom in the pages of Harper's Bazar, tells the following story to illustrate the reason why women do not usually prosper so well as men of some of the professions, for which they seem to be quite as well adapted:

"It seemed to me that women might especially succeed as wood engravers, so I consulted with him.

"Don't you see the difficulty?" he asked, with great kindness and interest.

"No," said I: "You must instruct me."

"Well," answered he "I have employed women here very often, and I wish I could feel more encouraged. But the truth is, that when a young man comes to me and begins his work, he feels that it is his life's business. He is to be carved by his hand, and he settles steadily and earnestly to his labor, determined to master it, and with every incitement spurring him on. He cannot marry until he knows his trade. It is exactly the other way with the girl. She may be as poor as the youth, and as wholly dependent upon her labor for her living. But she feels that she will probably be married by-and-by, and she must give up wood engraving. So she goes on listlessly; she has no ambition to excel; she does not feel that her happiness depends upon it. She will marry, and then her husband's wages will support her. She may not say so," said the engraver, "but she thinks so, and it spoils her work."

The same is true with regard to many employments in which women have been engaged. We know that as clerks at Washington they are far less successful than men. Their habits of work are much less accurate, and they do not give their minds to their duties with the same conscientiousness and fidelity. The reason is the same as that given by our Old Bachelor. They do not feel that these duties are the business of their life, and that their whole success or failure depends upon the manner in which they are performed. Whatever they do, love, matrimony, and the care of a household of their own, are always at the bottom of their thoughts. — N. Y. Sun.

THE TENDENCIES OF THE AGE.—The New York Times closes a strong editorial on "A White Man's Government" with the following political prediction:

If the Democrats, directly or indirectly, by words or by acts, by doctrines they announce or by men they nominate, take their stand upon this position, that this is exclusively a "white man's Government," they doom themselves not only to defeat, but to disaster and death. It is not only a reaction against the war, and against the principles which it established;—it is a reaction against the tendencies and events of the age—against that broader and higher civilization which is making men everywhere more tolerant of mere accidental distinctions, and which is admitting them as men to share the rights and responsibilities, as they must share the burdens and penalties of Governments and laws.

A Trenton paper relates the following political conversation which recently took place in that city: "Republican—Do you think many Democrats will vote for Gen. Grant? Democrat—No. Republican—Why? Democrat—Because he hurt himself when he captured Lee, Republican—Oh! I see.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, the St. Albans Bank, a corporation of the State of Vermont, located and doing business at St. Albans, in the county of Franklin, has made application to me, requesting me to issue a proclamation designating some day for the termination of the existence of said corporation;

And whereas, it has been made to appear to me that two-thirds of the legal votes of the stockholders of said corporation were given in favor of said application;

Now, therefore, I, Paul Dillingham, Governor of the State of Vermont, in conformity with said application, and the provisions of section eight of the General Statutes of Vermont, do hereby issue my proclamation, and declare that on the twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1868, the said corporation shall cease to exist as fully and with the same effect as if said charter expired by the limitation thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto signed my name and caused the seal of the State of Vermont to be hereunto affixed, in Executive Chamber at Waterbury, this 26th day of May, A. D. 1867, and of the independence of the United States the 91st.

PAUL DILLINGHAM.
